I am searching for a front-end web development position. I studied at FGCU where I got my bachelor's degree in philosophy as well as minors in computer science and mathematics. I am driven to learn and constantly improve, and I have applied this enthusiasm to teaching myself web development as it is perfect for my passion for learning and problem-solving. I am proficient in the most common web development technologies today including HTML, CSS, Javascript, and React. More importantly, however, I have great confidence that I can teach myself any technology I might need in the future and that I can fit in in any work environment. Outside of work I love to read fantasy novels, study Spanish, and recently I have started practicing Jiu Jitsu.
